

SlateStone Wealth brings on Chief Investment Strategist

Robert Pavlik has recently joined SlateStone Wealth as Chief Investment Strategist where he'll be responsible for guiding the firm's investment team and providing ongoing market commentary and outlook.

“Mr. Pavlik is a highly accomplished portfolio manager and analyst and brings a wealth of expertise to his new role. He will lead SlateStone's investment team where his skills will prove invaluable to our clients in assessing opportunities for global financial markets and investment prospects in particular,” said Sherri Daniels, CEO and Co-Founder.

His recent work as Chief Market Strategist for Boston Private Wealth and prior to that, Banyan Partners, has earned him recognition for his equity research and he is regularly quoted in national media where he is sought out for his commentary and insights by The Wall Street Journal and Bloomberg, as well as numerous other outlets. He is also a frequent guest on CNBC, Dow Jones Radio and other broadcast media.

Having spent more than 25 years in the financial services sector, Mr. Pavlik is the latest leading industry expert to join the SlateStone team of professionals that also includes T. Matt Brann as Chief Strategic Officer who joined the firm last October to lead strategic growth initiatives including business development, practice management innovation and client engagement, Milagros Kleiner as Chief Compliance Officer, and Michelle Bonney as Controller further rounding out the SlateStone executive management team.

“Bob's addition to our skilled team will further support our wealth advisors by arming them with greater market and global economic perspective on a real-time basis. I am excited to have Bob join our team,” said Eyal “Alan” Galinsky, Executive Managing Director of SlateStone Wealth.
